Dear ACSF members,

It is with great excitement that we finally announce our next Symposium (ACSF 12) to take place in FALLINGWATER (Southwestern Pennsylvania), Frank Lloyd Wright's most famous work, and arguably his finest house. A destination for architects, landscape architects, historians, designers, and artists, as well as the general public, Fallingwater offers a perfect context where to meditate, sense, share, discuss, and even plan new ways of thinking and acting that ultimately define practices to a more constructive and hopeful future.

The symposium dates are May 27-30, 2020. As in previous symposia, ACSF 12 is structured around a main topic (in this case "Practices Toward a Future") but also open to ideas, works, and proposals relevant to the Forum's areas of interest. Given the attraction of Fallingwater, we will make sure that the number of attendees remains small enough to secure personal connections and in-depth dialogue. Optional meditation will be offered each morning and there will free time for connecting to oneself, the beautiful surrounding woods, and, of course, Fallingwater. Keynote speakers are Frank Lloyd Wright / sacred space scholar Anat Geva, filmmaker Brent Green, and architectural theoretician David Leatherbarrow. Part of the symposium activities will include a visit to another remarkable house by Frank Lloyd Wright that is nearby: Kentuck Knob.

Submissions

Interested individuals are invited to submit proposals for either the SYMPOSIUM THEME or an OPEN TOPIC. Proposals may be submitted in one of four categories: panel, project, paper, and workshop. There are different requirements for each type of submissions. Proposals will be blind peer-reviewed by at least three ACSF scholars/professionals. The submission deadline is February 1st, 2020.

If after reading the ACSF 12 website you still have questions, please contact us via email at acsf12fallingwater@gmail.com. We hope you consider joining us at Fallingwater for what will be a truly memorable event.

Cheers!
